

Fužinar volleyball club enter the 2025/26 season with ambitions – and GEN-I's support

GEN-I, a company that believes that supporting sport has broad importance and makes a vital contribution to community development, has become the proud sponsor of the first-division volleyball club Fužinar from Koroška. Sport is not only competition but an arena in which the values of teamwork, respect and responsibility can be built – values that the company lives by itself.

Ljubljana, 21 October – GEN-I works on the principle that dedication and inclusivity can create positive change. The company loves working with athletes to help them grow and reach new heights of sporting success, believing that every step taken on the field of play can resonate through society as a whole.

Fužinar volleyball club has passed on the traditional Koroškan values of commitment and hard work from generation to generation ever since 1928, producing young generations of players whose dedication helps them grow into top-class athletes and make their local community proud. Both locally and more widely, Fužinar are celebrated as the incubator of a host of excellent, high-achieving Slovenian volleyball players, including those who have starred at international level. The club remains true to its philosophy: to bank on homegrown players, reinforced by those returning to the club after years of experience and success elsewhere. The result is a balanced team that combines youthful energy, maturity and experience.

GEN-I firmly believes that ideas and success are created by hard work and cooperation – and that goes for the energy sector as much as for sport. As the country's most trusted electricity supplier, GEN-I is proud to partner with Fužinar volleyball club as the new season gets under way, and is convinced that the signing of this new sponsorship agreement will be the start of a joint story of achievement and success. The achievement of new volleyball victories will strengthen the values of respect and inclusion that unite both sport and society as a whole. The company draws inspiration from the fact that a new story will arise from this cooperation, one that contributes to a sustainable and responsible future, and inspires athletes, fans and the wider community alike. In this spirit, GEN-I issues this rallying cry to all volleyball lovers: "See you at the game. Let's enter the new season together and win together!"
